Colonials announces exciting partnership with Parisi Speed School

The New Jersey Soccer Group and Parisi Speed School today announced an unique partnership, providing soccer players from all of the NJSG partner organizations the opportunity to get faster, stronger, and build self-confidence through improving their athletic performance. Parisi Speed schools are the industry leader in performance enhancement through their trainers and facilities. In 2006, they produced three of the fastest six athletes at the NFL combine—an unprecedented result compared to any other training facility in the country. This summer Parisi will be working weekly with the Morris County Colonials and Millburn Magic senior teams, as well as providing performance evaluations for players on their YPSL youth summer teams. In addition, The Morris Plains-based facility is offering a free taster session for one morning at each of the 12 summer camps running in conjunction with SONESOCCKER.

Colonials Head Coach Adrian Borrows was delighted with the partnership: “we are always looking for the best possible training to provide our players to enhance their overall experience”, he said, “Parisi is a known name that consistently produces results. While we will benefit this season, the real benefits are the long term improvements in performance that the players will take back to their collegiate programs”. Magic coach Andy Sones shared those sentiments, saying “I told the players this weekend that Parisi would be providing the conditioning element of the program, and they are excited. Many of them have worked with Parisi trainers for an number of years to get where they are now—and this helps them continue their progress. Soccer at the highest levels is about results—and Parisi gets results in the players they work with.

Parisi Director of Training Steve Leo was also pleased with the partnership: “We are happy to be working with such high quality organization”, he identified, continuing “this will give not only top players the benefit of our training, hundreds of younger players the opportunity to experience our training at first hand at SONESOCCKER camps and select programs”. While the younger teams and camps will take place all over northern New Jersey, the senior teams will come to the impressive Parisi Morris Plains facility for weekly sessions when the season starts in May.

Started by Bill Parisi in Bergen County sixteen years ago, the Parisi organization—encompassing health clubs, speed school method of training—has grown to become a truly national brand, featured on ESPN for NFL combine training and Olympic athlete results.

The Morris County Colonials team are part of the New Jersey Soccer Group of companies, a management company for a family of soccer based organizations offering a full range of soccer services in New Jersey. The National Premier Soccer League (NPSL) is an open aged national league representing the highest level of amateur soccer in the United States. The Colonials are playing in the Mid-Atlantic Division of the Eastern Conference, with regional and national finals following the conclusion of the domestic season.
